The book "The scarlet letter" written by writer Nathaniel Hawthorne is typical of the American psychological novel of the 19th century. This is one of the grimmest stories of women's fate I have ever known. I read the book in bewilderment, pain, hatred, and complete helplessness. Young woman Hester Prynne was found guilty and sentenced to wear a red A on her chest for being "pregnant unmarried." The letter A stands for "Adulteru," which means adultery. In those days, adultery was the greatest crime against women. Any woman wearing a red A-shirt will face a maximum sentence of death. But in this story, Hester bravely fought not to accept death, but then the price she had to pay was contempt, turning away a whole community of people towards her.

I felt the extreme pain of that woman when I had to live alone with evil, curious eyes that seemed to pierce my heart. But I can't help but admire her because she can live every moment to the fullest to give the crystallization of her true love and the man she loves a chance to live. I attentively follow her every step on the journey that she is on. I didn't take my eyes off her and those around her even for a moment. And I have realized that the eyes of the people next to her when looking at her have gradually changed. I no longer felt the suffocating hatred and anger in my eyes. Instead, I met a gaze of love, forgiveness, and empathy. Indeed, her pure life, love, and sacrifice prevented the community from turning their backs on her. She lived a simple, calm life like so many other women. People no longer blame her. Naturally, you deserve it with what you've been through. Her kind heart has made the red letter A on her body a fading trace of the distant past. Still, now, when looking at the girl who used to have a reputation for adultery and pregnancy, people only feel compassion and selflessness for the plight of the women of this society.

The Dublin is the first short story of James Joyce, one of the greatest and most influential writers of the 20th century.

The Dublin people probably come from the story "The Dead": Being a teacher and a book collaborator, Gabriel has an arrogant intellectual look and only pays attention to themselves, but it is at a messy party, through Gabriel's contact and collision, the most pride of Gabriel gradually collapsed and the highest peak was at the end of the party when watching his wife - Gabriel Conroy, Gretta, listening to a piece of music, and finally knew the past of his wife. She told him about a boyfriend from her youth, and he had a spiritual manifestation of life and death and the relationship between people.

A nationalist criticized the thought that he was an intellectual. He was only worried about the cliché speech, the belief that he was noticed and wholeheartedly, and then knew that Gretta had another love affair. And the young man who died for her, Gabriel, realized that Gretta's life had hidden corners he had never known.

He is aware of himself as "dumb" and understands the meaning of life, where the dead reign in memory as important as the living, where people must know how to accept life and death. So the first time he thought about going to the west, he went to find out about his nation, not summer vacation in Europe.

Those moments of "revelation" have different effects on the conclusions: when making the sourness increases multiplied, because the characters from which they are aware of how they have lived in the dark, but they are not able to go beyond their lives, sometimes make people turn good, seeking to change, even negligible, the life full of desperation right now.

By writing and publishing the Dublin people, Joyce showed a great position as a moral writer: Joyce told the darkness in his national social life, denouncing the ideology of the colonialists. He and religion covered the Ireland colony, criticizing the weakness of individuals who did not dare to rise—at the same time, he expressed symbolic sympathy with the fate of the miserable people—trapped in life's difficulties.

Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire

Harry Potter and the Weasley family go to see the 422nd Quidditch World Finals, where a mysterious phenomenon that scares everyone is the appearance of Death Eaters. Then he entered his fourth year at Hogwarts, with the challenging Triwizard Competition.

The Triwizard Competition is a contest where the winner will be recorded in history. The reward of this game is a thousand Gold galleons and the Triwizard Cup. In this contest, two more schools participated, each nominating a representative. But someone put Harry's name in the goblet of fire, so he was forced to compete despite being underage, and this year's competition had four people, including Harry.

After the end of the first competition, Hogwarts held a Yule Ball. That night, Harry had a dream again in Riddle's room, and this time he could see the faces of the people in the room.

Harry told Headmaster Albus Dumbledore that the face was Barty Crouch's son, a Ministry of Magic member. The end of the prom also means that the second contest is coming. With the hint inside the dragon egg, Harry knew that the second challenge would take place on the shores of the Black Lake.

Harry saved Ron Weasley and Fleur's sister thanks to the potion given to him by the house elf Dobby. Therefore, although he finished third in this exam, Harry was given an almost perfect score. On the other hand, Cedric finished first when he saved Cho Chang, Krum came in second when he saved Hermione, and Fleur was attacked by a sea monster and had to give up.

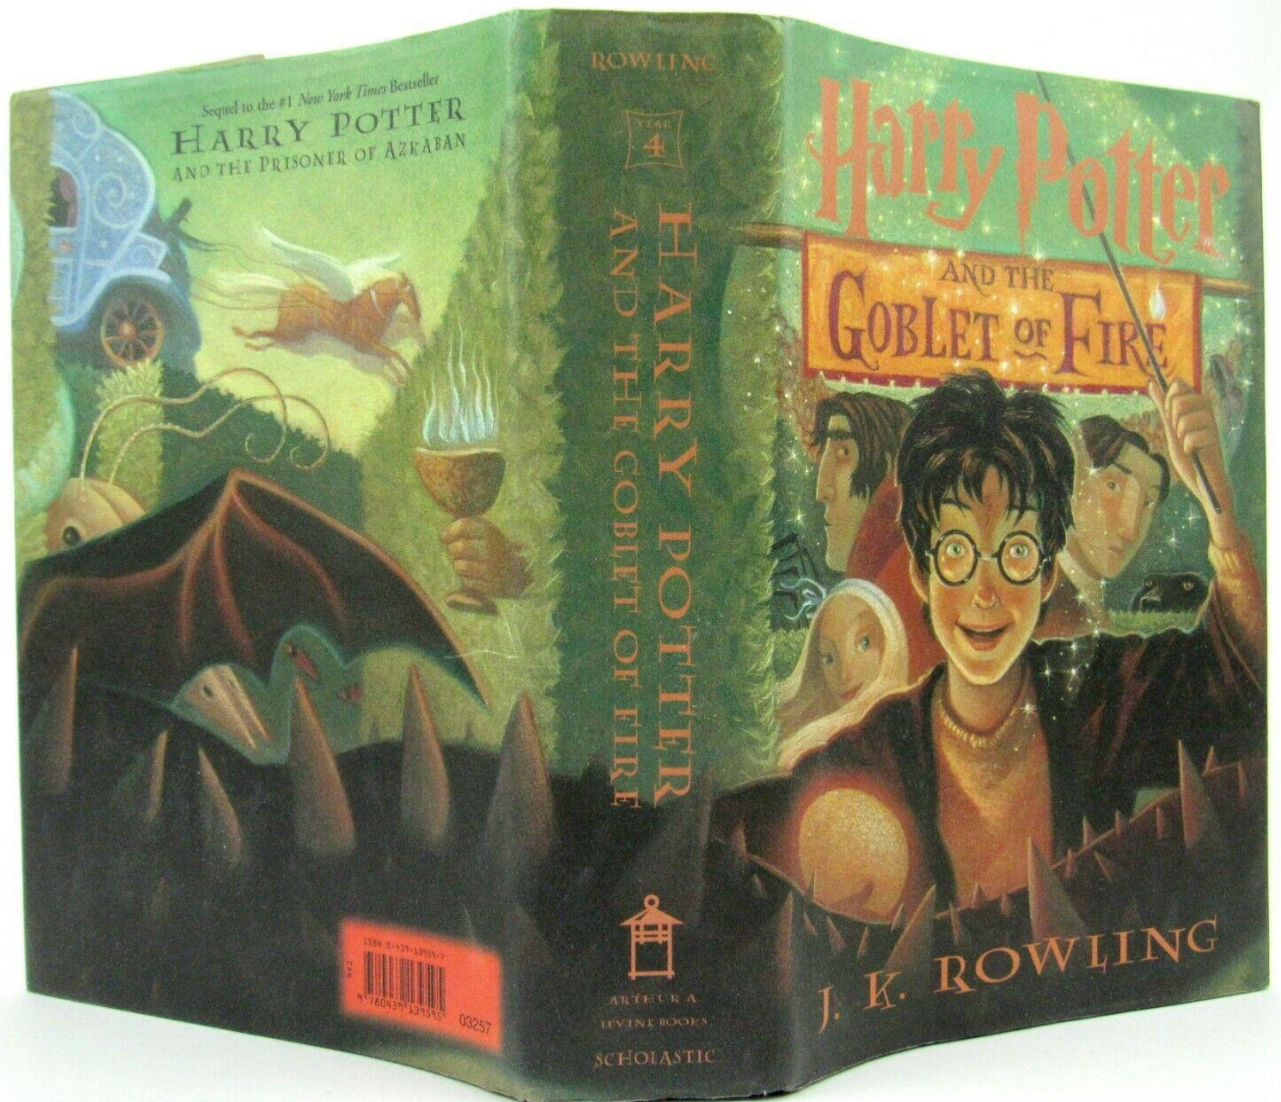

In the third attempt of the Triwizard Tournament, the four must find the contest trophy, which Defense Against the Dark Arts teacher Alastor Moody hid. Harry Potter and Cedric Diggory took the award together, but it was a portkey. The two flew to Tom Riddle's father's graveyard, where Harry had been in his dream.

Cedric is killed by "Wormtail" with the Avada Kedavra curse, and Harry is tied right over the grave of Tom Riddle's father. "Wormtail" took the blood of Harry's enemies and own flesh and bones of Voldemort's father for the Dark Lord so that Voldemort could be reborn in the most powerful way.

Voldemort comes to life again; Harry escapes the graveyard, but the Ministry of Magic doesn't believe it. It was not until the end that Harry discovered the arrangement of Barty Crouch Jr. under Moody's mask. He arranged everything for Harry to reach the graveyard, for Lord Voldemort to be resurrected.

Headmaster Dumbledore discovered and informed Azkaban Prison. Dumbledore helps Harry understand that he can face Voldemort in the graveyard without dying thanks to ancient magic that later stories will clarify.

Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire is the fourth book in the Harry Potter series written by J.K. Rowling. It is a fantasy novel that follows the story of the famous wizard, Harry Potter, who is now fourteen. This book marks a turning point in the series as it becomes much darker and more complex than its predecessors. However, a detail sticks to my mind when I read the book: the fight between Harry and a dragon in the Triwizard Tournament.

First, let's look at Harry Potter. The boy wizard is known for his bravery and quick thinking, but he is not without his flaws. For example, Harry tends to act impulsively, which can sometimes land him in trouble. Nonetheless, Harry exhibits remarkable courage in the face of danger, and his powerful magic makes him a formidable opponent.

On the other hand, the Hungarian Horntail is a fierce beast, capable of breathing fire and wielding razor-sharp claws and teeth. It is known for being one of the most dangerous dragons in the magical world, and many have perished attempting to battle it. However, the Horntail is also known to be hot-headed and easily provoked.

The battle between Harry Potter and the Hungarian Horntail is a thrilling one. Armed with his wand and broomstick, Harry must dodge the dragon's deadly flames and evade its sharp claws. While quick on his feet, Harry is almost caught by the Horntail several times during the battle. However, Harry can outsmart the dragon by using his broomstick to confuse it and lure it into a trap, allowing him to retrieve the golden egg he needs to continue in the Triwizard Tournament.

What makes this battle particularly exciting is the way it showcases both Harry's strengths and weaknesses. We see him using his quick thinking and magic to outmaneuver the Horntail, but we also see him nearly getting caught due to his impulsiveness. Additionally, Horntail's hot-headedness plays a crucial role in its defeat, as it falls prey to Harry's trap.

The battle between Harry Potter and the Hungarian Horntail is thrilling, showcasing both characters' strengths and weaknesses. While Harry is ultimately victorious, the Horntail is a formidable opponent, highlighting the danger that magical creatures can pose in the wizarding world. The scene is a testament to the creative genius of J.K. Rowling, who has brought to life a world full of danger, excitement, and wonder.
